A mourner carries a wreath to the base of the Ironworkers Memorial Bridge at the 50th anniversary ceremony of the bridge's collapse yesterday. The accident claimed 23 lives.

Tragedy spans 50 years

Memories still vivid a half-century after deadly bridge collapse

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

Lou Lessard was 29 years old the day — 50 years ago yesterday — the world "literally turned on its head."

The former ironworker was on what was then the Second Narrows Bridge when the ground beneath his feet gave way.

He and 78 men, along with several tons of twisted steel and equipment, fell 50 metres into the Burrard Inlet.

"The hottest day of the year suddenly became very cold," he said at a memorial ceremony marking the anniversary of the tragedy. "I got up through the icy waters by following the sun hanging through the mud."

Eighteen workers and a rescue diver never surfaced.

"None of them was a stranger to me. I think of them very often, especially on this day," said Lessard.

When Phil Nuytten heard over the radio that the bridge was falling he rushed to the scene.

"The first thing that struck me was the incredible noise, people screaming ... that miserable sound of metal screeching on metal, and chaos everywhere," said Nuytten, who was 16 at the time. "There were still guys hanging from the wreckage. All that ran through my mind was, 'Get in the water.'"

"Under conditions of extreme crisis, everyone's thought is not self-preservation but to help, and that exemplifies the best qualities in all of us. That's the memory that I take away from the collapse."

Airline cuts to hit city

Local workers among 2,000 being laid off by Air Canada

By ANDREA WOO
for Metro Vancouver

RAFE ARNOTT/METRO VANCOUVER

Empty Air Canada counters at Vancouver International Airport signal changes to come. The country's largest air carrier slashed 2,000 jobs nationwide as a result of soaring fuel costs.

About 2,000 Air Canada employees across the country will be laid off within the next year, yet some local employees are hardly surprised by the news.

"We're used to it," said a man who works in passenger services who asked to remain anonymous. Shrugging off the news, he added: "We see it all the time, the layoffs and hires."

Another employee, a flight attendant of 12 years, shared the same jaded sentiment.

"I've been through so many layoffs already," she said. "There have been so many over the years, so some of us have been through it many times."

According to Leslie Dias, president of Canadian Auto Workers Local 2002, which represents Air Canada employees across the country, about 99 workers will be laid off at Vancouver International Airport alone — nearly one in four of its roughly 450 employees.

"We're really disappointed, and to some extent there is a fair bit of anger out there," she said. "The reality is that our members — Air Canada employees in general — have sustained difficult times for many years."

Dias added that there will be cuts in flights to Asia, which will likely have a significant effect on Vancouver, which is a gateway. Another employee said there would be no more Vancouver-Osaka flights.

> « We see it all the time, the layoffs and hires. »
> Air Canada employee

Air Canada will be cutting a total of 2,000 jobs across the country and crimp its capacity by seven per cent as a result of soaring gas prices. The company says every dollar-per-barrel increase equates to an additional $26 million for the airline every year.

The company will first approach senior members with buyout options. It will then resort to laying off its most junior members, according to employees.

RCMP Taser report in Crown's hands

Recommendations on charges absent

By JOYCE YIP
for Metro Vancouver

report

» A long-awaited Taser report by RCMP Complaints Commissioner Paul Kennedy will be released today in Ottawa.

The RCMP investigation into the death of Robert Dziekanski at Vancouver International Airport last year is complete and has been handed over to the Crown for review.

Dziekanski, a 40-year-old Polish immigrant, died shortly after he was Tasered at least twice by Mounties on Oct.14 in the airport's international arrival lounge. The incident was videotaped and received attention worldwide.

The RCMP report, which was forwarded to Crown a month ago, makes no recommendation as to whether charges should or should not be laid.

Although B.C. police can make recommendations on whether they believe charges should be laid, most investigators do not include them, and Crown prosecutors are unlikely to be influenced by recommendations anyway.

"The recommendations part is a little antiquated," said Stan Lowe, a Crown spokesman. "Even if they made them, we still conduct our own, independent assessments to determine whether or not it meets our charge assessments."

Father who placed ad for baby in new trouble

By DONNA NG
for Metro Vancouver

Roughly three weeks after allegedly listing his week-old baby for sale on craigslist.com, Jeremy Frederick Pete is apparently in trouble again.

Last Monday, Coquitlam RCMP Crime Reduction Unit (CRU) noticed a suspicious vehicle near Lougheed Highway. A man was seen moving two flat-screen televisions into a car around a motel parking lot. CRU members stopped the man's vehicle before it left and found a stolen credit card.

court

» Pete appeared in Port Coquitlam court yesterday.

Pete is charged with a count of forgery, possession of a stolen credit card and two counts of possession of stolen property.

Pete garnered national attention last month after his seven-day-old daughter was listed for sale on craigslist.com.

"A new baby girl, 7 days old, healthy and very cute," the ad read.

The baby's mother and Pete have said the listing and the $10,000 price tag was a joke. Both parents are known to police and were arrested. No charges were laid.

Screening program for oral cancer launched in DTES

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

The B.C. Cancer Agency yesterday launched a mobile screening program in the Downtown Eastside to reach people most at risk for oral cancer.

Miriam Rosin, director of the agency's Oral Cancer Prevention Program, said DTES residents are more susceptible to the disease because they tend to smoke and drink, have chronic infections, poor nutrition and barriers to accessing medical and dental care.

Rob Morgan, 45, learned he had an abscess in his mouth after attending the screening program.

He said he didn't know he could have been at risk for cancer, nor that there was a service available to screen for the disease.

"There are (already) so many people dying in the DTES," he said. "I want to tell everybody that this is a deadly disease."

Liz Evans, executive director of the Portland Hotel Society Community Services Society, said the program brings "dignity and a sense of respect" to members of the community.

» One in 10,000 British Columbians is diagnosed with oral cancer annually. The rate is one in 150 for DTES residents.

"They don't value their health because they don't value themselves. We (want to) let them know their lives are important and worth saving."

Bridge failures still a concern: Expert

But safety gear has improved, says WorkSafeBC official

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

Fifty years after the Ironworkers Memorial Bridge collapsed into the Burrard Inlet, killing 18 workers and a rescue diver, experts say a similar accident could still happen today.

"This was a failure in the bridge, and we've seen failures in other bridges around the world since this one," said Al Johnson, regional director with WorkSafeBC.

"(But) the level of safety is very different today than it was then," he said. "I think there's certainly a lot more attention paid to safety in the workplace, innovative safety systems and practices."

Johnson said fall protection has improved in "leaps and bounds."

"If they were wearing fall protection in those days they were very different than they are today and so you would see people tied off for the most part."

Convicted attacker to serve sentence at youth facility

One of the convicted attackers who left a Surrey teen a quadriplegic will serve his sentence in a youth detention facility until late January.

The B.C. Court of Appeal ruled yesterday that 18-year-old Tuan Nguyen will serve his 20-month conditional sentence in a youth facility, not in the community.

Following his original sentence, he and his friends were caught on camera laughing in the elevator.

Levy

At a dance in October, Michael Levy was punched by Nguyen before three other attackers struck him with a glass bottle, sprayed him with pepper spray and then gave him the final blow on the head, neck and back with a hatchet-like weapon.

PNE celebrates rollercoaster

Suzanne Anton had tears in her eyes as she disembarked the famed wooden rollercoaster at the Pacific National Exhibition for the first time yesterday.

"It's pretty scary," said the councillor, who was given an 8-by-10 photo of herself, screaming her lungs out atop the ride. "There's no logic to it, and your brain tells you this is a pretty stupid thing to be doing."

Anton was on hand to proclaim yesterday as Playland's Wooden RollerCoaster Day on the 50th anniversary of the ride's launch.

Also in attendance were Nina Fraley and Jennifer Juliech, the daughter and granddaughter of the coaster's designer Carl Phare, who sat in the front row during the first ride after Anton's proclamation.

"The first time she went on, she was two years old, between her father and her sister," said Fraley, of Juliech.

The coaster officially opened in 1958 and averages half-a-million riders annually. It reaches 22 metres at its highest point.

NDP wants to Axe the Gas Tax

New Democrat leader Carole James launched an Axe the Gas Tax campaign yesterday in an attempt to tank Premier Gordon Campbell's 2.41 cents-per-litre addition that begins next month.

"At a time when average families are struggling with record high gas prices, Gordon Campbell is hitting consumers with a gas tax that is unfair," said James.

The Ministry of Finance, however, contends that the government derives no new revenue from the tax.

Instead, British Columbians will receive a two per cent income tax reduction, which will increase to five per cent after 2008, regardless if they use gas. The bill was passed in May.

"Campbell's gas tax hits ordinary consumers, but lets big polluters off the hook," said James. "If he was serious about climate change, he would implement a cap-and-trade system that reduces emissions at source, rollback transit fares and provide families with more options to reduce emissions."

Concern about fair trial

Public outcry may result in difficulties for justice system

By ROBYN YOUNG
Metro Halifax

SANDOR FIZLI/REUTERS

These were just some of the people gathered outside the Bridgewater, N.S., courthouse where Penny Boudreau made her first court appearance on Monday.

Following massive public outcry against Penny Boudreau after her first court appearance Monday, some residents of Bridgewater, N.S., wonder if it's possible for the woman accused of killing her only child to have a fair trial.

"I think there'd be a problem seeking an impartial jury," said Barbara Wicks, who has lived in the town for more than 40 years.

Wicks said she was disappointed to hear about the angry mob that hurled insults and accusations at Boudreau after she appeared in court to face charges of first-degree murder in the death of her 12-year-old daughter Karissa.

Dalhousie University Law professor Archie Kaiser says it's the responsibility of the justice system to see that Boudreau is innocent until proven guilty.

"There are many protective mechanisms to ensure that somebody who is accused in a situation like this is able to attain a fair trial," Kaiser said yesterday.

The judge can ask to change the location of the trial, for example, he said.

Kaiser agreed it's important for the public not to jump to conclusions about the case.

"She's entitled to the presumption of innocence," he said.

Boudreau's lawyer Pat Atherton did not return phone calls yesterday, but in answer to whether or not Boudreau would receive a fair trial, Crown prosecutor Paul Scovil said: "I don't see why not."

He said the anger the case stirred up in the 8,000-person town won't necessarily be a problem.

Ex-CFLer ends Ottawa rampage

An Ottawa sportscaster and ex-CFL player says he was just in the right place to help when he subdued a woman who rampaged in the ByWard Market Monday evening.

The incident began when a market street ambassador heard screaming and swearing at around 5:15 p.m., and spotted a woman outside the mall pushing elderly people and spitting at them.

The suspect then allegedly approached and kicked a woman who was trying to put her child in a vehicle.

Evraire then came outside to restrain the woman. He ran up to the suspect, grabbed her arms and brought her to the ground, holding her until police arrived.

A powerful car bomb exploded in a crowded market area of Baghdad yesterday, killing 51 people and wounding 75, in the deadliest attack in the Iraqi capital in months.

Police said the bomb was placed in a pickup truck parked next to minibus taxis near the main market in the predominantly Shiite neighbourhood of al-Hurriya in northwestern Baghdad. The explosion left a heap of smoking, mangled wreckage.

At that time of day, the market is packed with shoppers buying food. Police said 51 people were killed and 75 wounded, including women and children. The blast set fire to 20 shops and levelled a multi-storey building, a security source said.

U.S. officials blamed Sunni Arab al Qaeda militants for the huge car bombs that regularly hit Baghdad in 2006 and 2007, at the height of sectarian conflict in Iraq.

DO YOU NEED A DETOX?

	YES	NO
Are you often tired?	■	■
Do you get headaches frequently?	■	■
Do you have a hard time losing weight?	■	■
Are you bloated or retaining water?	■	■
Mental cloudiness?	■	■
Is your skin getting bad?	■	■

These symptoms above are some of the most common signs of toxic overload, and detoxing once or twice a year is often recommended as a solution. In a recent study of 116 women in the UK, 70% were satisfied or very satisfied with the results from their Biofirm detox.

I unjunked my body!

Lina works in the fitness industry in Ottawa and recently came across an article on detoxing. Here is her story;

"I was having a hard time losing those stubborn extra pounds and I was tired a lot, which showed in my face. So when I came across a Biofirm story in the local newspaper, it made me curious.

It definitely made sense to me that we get tired and bloated from too many toxins in our foods and from our environment. But I didn't know that it made us gain weight! So I purchased a box of Biofirm and took the recommended 6 tablets a day for a month with lots of water and high-fibre foods. I was determined to unjunk my body!"

I lost 11 pounds on the detox!

"In the first 4 weeks I lost 7 pounds. I definitely felt lighter and my skin was looking great – I was glowing! I had read that it could be unpleasant to take Biofirm but I actually enjoyed it, especially because you are still able to do your daily duties. You don't have to stay home or do it on the weekends.

After the 30 days detox, I wanted to continue, so I bought another 14 days of tablets. Again, I lost another 4 pounds and my clothes were getting very loose! I was thrilled - and the great part is that I didn't have to exercise vigorously for 6 weeks!!"

DETOXING: A GREAT WAY TO START A HEALTHIER LIFE

Everyday, our bodies are exposed to toxins from the air we breathe, the water we drink and especially the processed foods we eat. If our bodies get overburden with toxins, our liver suffers and we start seeing the effect on our health; Our skin is affected, we get tired, we retain water, get headaches, digestion problems, bad breath and find it especially hard to lose weight.

Researchers have now discovered the biological cause of those stubborn pounds; Toxic particles bind water in the bodies' soft tissue and inhibit your metabolism from burning fat efficiently. The Conclusion: To lose weight, you must first cleanse your body!

Court delays ruling on BCE takeover

Decision could make takeovers more difficult

Canada's top court delayed a ruling yesterday on whether to approve or reject the buy-out of telecom company BCE Inc., a decision that could elevate the rights of bondholders and make takeovers more difficult.

The Supreme Court could add billions of dollars to BCE's market value if it approves the $34.8 billion transaction to take BCE private in what would be the world's largest leveraged buyout.

But shares could plunge if the court sides with bondholders who want the deal blocked, saying it would saddle BCE with too much debt. Such a ruling would have far-reaching implications, forcing companies to consider more than the interests of shareholders when weighing buyout proposals.

The court heard three hours of testimony, but declined to render a decision yesterday. It did not name a day, but it was keenly aware of the June 30 deadline for court approval of the deal.

Celtics stars Ray Allen and Paul Pierce both delivered clutch performances last night as Boston easily defeated the Los Angeles Lakers in Game 6 of the NBA Finals to take the championship. Pierce was named Finals MVP.

Celtics clinch 17th title by hammering Lakers

CELTICS 131 LAKERS 92

Boston's big three started the season with high hopes and finished with the Celtics' 17th championship in their storied franchise history with a record-setting performance.

Kevin Garnett scored 26 points and pulled down 14 rebounds, as the Celtics pounded the Los Angeles Lakers 131-92 last night in Game 6 of the NBA Finals.

Ray Allen overcame an eye injury and tied a Finals record by hitting seven shots from beyond the arc on the way to 26 points, and Paul Pierce, the third in the monumental trio, hit for 17 points and dished out 10 assists.

"This is just an unbelievable experience," Pierce said. "If you're going to win a championship, you want to win one with the Boston Celtics."

Rajon Rondo had a solid all-around performance to cap his second season in the league with 21 points, seven rebounds and eight assists. He also had six of Boston's Finals-record 18 steals, as Boston wrapped up its first NBA title since 1986 and did it in probably the most memorable rivalry in league history. Boston has played the Lakers in the Finals 11 times, winning nine of those matchups.

Garnett and Allen joined Pierce prior to the season and immediately there were huge expectations. The trio, who until this year had never played in a Finals contest, had a signature moment, coming out of the game together with 4:01 left.

"It just seemed like it was camaraderie from day one," Pierce said. "From the time Ray was traded, talking to him, from the time Kevin was traded, talking to him...this is all we talked about."

With the capacity crowd at TD Banknorth Garden chanting "17!, 17!" in the concluding minutes, Celtics head coach Doc Rivers hugged his players and was then the recipient of a celebratory bath of punch dumped over him by Pierce, who was then named the Finals MVP.

"This is unreal," Pierce said during a centre court ceremony to honor the champs. "Where we came from a year ago, where I was at ... to be here today and celebrating with my teammates ... what a great year it was this year."

Allen, who left the game in the opening quarter after being poked in his left eye, but returned in the second, finished the Finals with a record in three-pointers made with 22.

"We have a great balance here in this lineup," Allen said. "It seemed everything worked out all year. We respect each other. We're here sitting on championship 17. Thank you Boston!" METRO NEWS SERVICES

Anderson finally into Hall

Forwards Glenn Anderson and Igor Larionov are the newest players tabbed for induction into the Hockey Hall of Fame, as they were revealed as part of the 2008 class yesterday.

Anderson

Anderson and Larionov, a former Canuck, are joined in this year's class by former Western Hockey League head Ed Chynoweth and Ray Scapinello. Chynoweth, who passed away in April, was selected from the Builder category and Scapinello earned his induction as part of the Referee/Linesman category.

A member of the Edmonton dynasty in the mid-to-late '80's, Anderson spent 16 years in the NHL and compiled 498 goals and 1,099 points over 1,129 games with Edmonton, Toronto, the New York Rangers and St. Louis.

Larionov helped the Soviet Union take home Olympic gold in 1984 and 1988 along with a Canada Cup title in 1981.

He made his NHL debut in 1989, and skated for 14 seasons in the league for Vancouver, San Jose, Detroit, Florida and New Jersey. METRO NEWS SERVICES

France eliminated after showdown

EURO2008

Italy came out on top in a tense three-way tussle for a place in Sunday's Euro 2008 quarter-final against Spain, as the world champions beat 10-man France 2-0 and Romania lost by the same margin to Group C winners Netherlands.

Andrea Pirlo put Italy in front from the penalty spot in the 25th minute of yesterday's eagerly-anticipated repeat of the 2006 World Cup final after Eric Abidal clattered into Luca Toni and was dismissed by referee Lubos Michel.

Abidal's sending off was a second blow for the French after playmaker Franck Ribery was carried off on a stretcher with a knee injury.

With Netherlands already leading 1-0 in Berne, Daniele De Rossi made sure of Italy's victory on 62 minutes when his free kick was deflected into the net off the foot of Thierry Henry, standing in as captain for the injured Patrick Vieira.

Sweden and Russia will battle today for the last playoff spot and a date with the Netherlands on Saturday in Basel, Switzerland.

Interview gaffes occur often

By RAFAEL BRUSILOW
for Metro Vancouver

If you've ever embarrassed yourself at a job interview, you can take some solace in the fact that plenty of other people have done the same.

What's important is to learn from your mistakes so you can be better prepared the next time.

Lara Dodo, vice-president of administrative staffing firm OfficeTeam, has compiled a staggering collection of job interview blunder stories in her years helping people find work. She says most gaffes, big and small alike, boil down to a lack of common sense or simply poor judgment.

Cellphones are a frequent culprit, as users tend to lose their grip on sanity when handling or dealing with them.

> «Always be polite and professional to receptionists … receptionists play a highly influential role in the hiring process. »
> OfficeTeam's Lara Dodo

Once, Dodo says a candidate with more guts than brains took a call on their cell phone during an interview — a call which was for another job interview happening later that day at a different company.

Another time a potential hire forgot to turn off his cell, but rather than politely click it off and apologize, he just let it ring continuously and loudly — a rather unnerving choice.

Other classic flubs involved interviewees confusing the company name with a competitor's or even mixing up their own job backgrounds or having resumé embellishments revealed.

Unlike one person who Dodo says showed up in workout clothes, always dress conservatively even for positions, which may allow for casual attire.

"No interview is casual," Dodo said.

Above all, remember the age-old adage and don't shoot the messenger the front desk even — they are, after all, your gatekeeper into the job.

"Always be polite and professional to receptionists — research has shown that receptionists play a highly influential role in the hiring process. If you're rude, it won't reflect well," Dodo said.

A big cause for interview screw-ups is nervousness, Dodo says.

"Nerves can do some crazy thing to you. If the interview is at 11 o'clock, don't get there at 10:59. Give yourself time to relax. Be prepared and know what to expect in the interview," Dodo said.

If you do make a gaffe, show that you can fix it.

"If you are aware that you've made a mistake, apologize and correct yourself. Any problem that's handled gracefully may actually impress your interviewer," Dodo said.

Don't give up right away if you've flubbed your first impression — you may be able to turn things around with your personality, skills and experience.

"The bad impression doesn't necessarily take you out of the running if you've been able to showcase and emphasize your skills and experience well," Dodo said.

In the worst cases, learn from your mistake, let it go, and tell your friends about it over drinks.

"And at least it'll make for a great story," Dodo said.

Leaving your cellphone on is a common mistake for interviewees to make.

Marrying work with weddings

Nuptial planner makes a pretty penny on your day

By KRISTA MARTIN
for Metro Vancouver

Most women have been planning their dream weddings their entire lives, other women rely on a wedding planner such as Angela Girard to plan it for them.

Girard, 31, wanted to be an interior designer and took a program at BCIT, where she met her husband.

With a baby on the way and the exorbitant costs of child care, Girard worried about beginning a career in a profession that may take years to develop so she found herself wondering what to do.

"I remember planning my wedding and how much fun I had doing it," she said. "So I went back to school and took an event planning program at BCIT."

Girard's company, Reflection Events, is based in Port Coquitlam and oversees high-end events all over Greater Vancouver.

In a typical day, Girard finds herself picking up items for weddings, decorating venues and making sure her clients are relaxed and happy for their big day.

The job, not without its challenges, requires Girard to multi-task and be creative at all times.

"I call myself the wedding MacGyver because I can do some amazing things with a coconut and ball of string," she said.

With a busy summer looming, Girard said one of the perks is that she gets to eat fabulous food all summer long.

As glamorous as the job may seem, she often experiences 16-hour days, running errands, meeting with clients, and attending weddings.

> « I remember planning my wedding and how much fun I had doing it, so I went back to school and took an event planning program at BCIT. I call myself the wedding MacGyver because I can do some amazing things with a coconut and ball of string. »
> Angela Girard

As weddings are a multi-billion-dollar industry, there is a lot of money to be made for a successful wedding planner. While some women start out planning weddings for their friends, someone with an education background and a developing portfolio could start out with $50,000 per year.

"Most artists are starving but in this career you don't have to starve," said Girard.

Not only does she get to be creative on a daily basis, Girard said she also gets to meet people from all over the world — people from New York and Beverly Hills who are looking to get married in Vancouver.

What is the biggest job perk?

"I'm always surrounded by happiness," she said.

High school personas affect career: Study

job contentment

» Contentment with career progress is more prevalent among teacher's pets and athletes while student government members and geeks showed the greatest dissatisfaction with their career progress.

Does your status in high school impact where you'll eventually be in the workforce?

As high school graduations approach, Career Builder.com asked over 6,000 full-time workers age 30 and older to categorize their high school persona, and then compared those personas in terms of job level, salary, industry and job satisfaction.

Categories included personas such as student government, athlete, geek, honour society, cheerleader, drama club, teacher's pet and class clown.

"Thirty-nine per cent of workers age 30 and older said their high school experience had an influence on the job they hold today," said Rosemary Haefner, vice-president of human resources at CareerBuilder. "While there are a variety of factors that determine one's career path, high school … is essentially a stepping stone into a world of opportunity."

job level

Comparing job levels, the study suggests that cheerleaders were more likely to hold a vice-president role. Those who were in student government and teacher's pets had the greatest number of workers serving in director/manager/team lead positions today (24 per cent). Teacher's pets also had the greatest number of workers holding administrative/clerical positions (41 per cent).

Former honour society members, athletes and geeks were more drawn toward professional and technical services positions at 59 per cent, 55 per cent and 52 per cent, respectively.

job income

Former student government members were more likely to report making a six-figure salary with 12 per cent stating they are paid an annual salary of $100,000 or more. Honour society members followed and then athletes, geeks and class clowns.

Student government and honour society members and athletes ranked highest among those who earn an annual salary of $50,000. Teacher's pets were more likely to report earning less than $35,000 per year.

job satisfaction

Job satisfaction levels are highest among teacher's pets and cheerleaders. Eighty-one per cent of teacher's pets and 76 per cent of cheerleaders said they are satisfied with their jobs overall. Geeks and class clowns had the greatest number of workers who reported dissatisfaction with their jobs at 21 per cent and 18 per cent, respectively.

Preparation key to public speaking

It takes courage to speak before a large or small group audience. Most people would rather disappear than deliver a presentation.

"What will my audience think?" to "What if I freeze?" are some questions you might ask yourself in the heat of the moment. Boardroom situations and networking events are great when you feel confident.

How many corporate professionals are actually trained to become effective presenters? Is public speaking an innate or learned skill? For many, it's a combination. If the desire is there and you practise regularly, than like anything else, you can get very good at it.

key to business

» When it comes to speaking effectively, study your audience, practise regularly and always ask for the feedback of others you trust. You always need to gauge how you are doing.

Is the fear of public speaking something internal or external? Remember when you were in grade school petrified of standing before your classmates to deliver a presentation for the first time? How did it feel? A supportive environment can make an amazing difference to how you experience and see things. If other classmates laughed at you or you had a bad experience in school, this can stay with you for a lifetime.

Just imagine what public speaking can do for your business? If you are entrepreneurial or creative you need to work extra hard to get exposure and to influence those to listen to you. Great speakers gain great respect. It's a fact. Failure happens in life when you fail to prepare. Thus, do the thing you fear to do and you will get good at it.

» Smile and maintain eye contact with your audience.
» Discuss no more than three key points or benefits about your business.
» Practise delivering your talk with and without the use of notes or slides.
» Get the audience involved in your presentation by asking them questions.
» Memorize the facts, not the entire presentation.
» Make your visual aids look consistent and simple (less is more).
» Use humour, comparative examples and quotes to emphasize important points.
» End your presentation in timely fashion.

Employees dread vacation hangover

Time away from the office is meant to be enjoyed, but for some executives, the mounds of work they come back to may make them feel like they need, well, a vacation.

One in three advertising and marketing executives polled by The Creative Group said they enjoy breaks from the job but dread the work awaiting their return. Another 10 per cent said they prevent this scenario by rarely taking vacations.

Advertising and marketing executives were asked, "Which of the following statements most closely resembles your views on taking time off for vacation?"

"Most professionals recognize the value of taking vacations, but the downside for many is returning to a considerable backlog of projects," said Megan Slabinski, executive director of The Creative Group. "This may be particularly true right now, as some companies are operating with lean teams due to tighter budgets."

Slabinski noted that vacations can be an opportunity to task capable staff with new responsibilities. "High-potential employees who are being considered for management roles may welcome the chance to prove themselves while their supervisors are away," she said. "The key is to set up these individuals for success. Executives must ensure their second-in-command understands the resources available and has a good framework for making decisions."

vacation tips

The Creative Group offers three additional tips for ensuring smooth vacations:
» Use out-of-office functions. Leave outgoing messages on your e-mail and voicemail to let others know you are away and who to contact in your absence.
» Set boundaries. Clearly communicate if and when you want to be contacted about business matters while you're away.
» Bring in reinforcements. Hire freelancers to augment your team during staff vacations.

Accent on maximum value

Hyundai compact does not skimp on quality, fun

By MICHAEL BANOVSKY
for Metro Vancouver

Other than the attractive pricing, the Accent also looks ready to compete on quality and "fun factor."

Ten grand. Well, $9,995 if you want to split hairs. That's the cash price on the 2008 Hyundai Accent L three-door, a hatchback that was already a likable little compact car.

The price, incidentally, doesn't extend to the sedan version, and expectedly you get a pretty basic car for the money.

But it's 10 grand — what do you expect? The biggest and most essential option is air conditioning, which isn't standard equipment, and rings in at $1,678.95 as a dealer-installed option. Add another $1,000 if you want the optional four-speed automatic.

If you'd like the full rundown of what to expect after slipping behind the wheel of the least expensive car in Canada (a claim shared by its similarly priced Kia Rio corporate cousin), you'll find: power steering, 14-inch steel wheels with full wheel covers, dual front airbags, seatbelt pre-tensioners, 60/40-split folding rear seats, multi-adjustable driver's seat, four-speaker AM/FM/CD/MP3 stereo, tinted glass, rear spoiler, and rear wiper/washer.

The Accent L's engine is a torque-rich, 1.6-litre four-cylinder rated at 110 horsepower that's a good match for the optional four-speed automatic transmission. The standard five-speed manual works well, though the long throws between gears detracts from the sporty ride.

There's nothing out of the ordinary on the chassis or on the steering and suspension side, but it's the end product that counts and the Accent delivers a solid feel on the road. The ride is slightly firm, but the body doesn't lean much and this appealing little car takes corners very confidently.

The subcompact segment in Canada is alive with tough competitors these days. Witness the Honda Fit and Nissan's Versa, not to mention the Suzuki Swift, Chevrolet Aveo, Pontiac Wave, Toyota Yaris and Kia Rio. In this category, Hyundai sees the Yaris as its main rival and, in typical Hyundai fashion, it's taking on the Toyota with a bigger car and more stuff for the money.

If you've got very little to spend, even a well-maintained used car may be on your radar. But arranging financing, making sure the vehicle is sound, and warranty headaches can result from not doing your homework. Buying a super-inexpensive car from a dealership alleviates those concerns — plus it lets you slip into a "new" car.

Before the price reduction, the Accent could hold its own against its market rivals. Now, it looks ready to also compete on quality and in the "fun factor" sweepstakes. Now, it's 10 grand — and still very much the good car it was at its original mid-$13,000 price point.

2008 Hyundai Accent

- Type: Subcompact two-door hatchback FWD
- Price: $9,995
- Engine: 1.6-litre L4 DOHC

- Torque: 106 @ 4,500 rpm

Highlights:

- Only 10 stacks!
- Good looks
- Good value
- Safety equipment

Power steering and dual front airbags are some of the items you'll find inside one of Canada's least expensive cars.

Fit proves Honda can still build great subcompacts

By BRADLEY HORN
for Metro Vancouver

The likable four-door, five-seat Fit is Honda's entry-level product, positioned below the much-loved Civic model.

The likable four-door, five-seat Fit is Honda's entry-level product, positioned below the much-loved Civic model.

Since the Fit's 2001 debut in Japan (where it's also built), the Fit has spread to 117 countries (including Europe under the "Jazz" name), won several awards, and has already surpassed the one million sales mark.

There's a conscious effort throughout to engineer as much cargo room as possible into the Fit's compact dimensions. While the front suspension is a design similar to that in the new Civic, the rear is a torsion beam layout — chosen because it allows the cargo floor to sit 72 mm lower than with a multilink design.

Honda also moved the Fit's fuel tank from the usual space behind the rear seats to beneath the front chairs, freeing up room for the car's innovative flipping and folding seat layout.

That space saving allows the 60/40-split rear seats to do some pretty amazing acrobatics. The standard "Magic Seat" has four arrangements: Foremost is "Utility," where the rear seatbacks folds forward (and flat) without removing the headrests, almost doubling the cargo volume from 603 litres (21.3 cu-ft) to 1186 litres (41.8 cu-ft). "Tall" sees the seat cushion fold up for carrying vertical objects. "Long" puts the rear and front seat down flush for carrying objects up to 2.4 metres (8-ft.), followed by "Refresh," where the front seats recline flush with the rear cushion, creating a bed-like setup.

Also standard is an electric power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering system (from the new Civic Si), which allows for sporty handing and improved fuel economy. Also standard are ABS brakes.

Power comes from a 1.5-litre four-cylinder engine using Honda's VTEC variable valve timing system and drive-by-wire throttle control. All models put out 109 horsepower — not huge, but in the thick of it with the rest of the class. The standard transmission is a smooth five-speed manual, with a class-exclusive five-speed automatic optional, geared to get the most out of the small displacement engine.

Company founder Soichiro Honda once said, "You must go after the opportunities that arise in life that you are best equipped to do." With the Fit, Honda has returned to its hatchback roots, proving that even with high-end Acuras and the NSX under its belt, the automaker still knows what makes a great subcompact.

Shine a light on road ahead

When drivers get behind the wheel, their headlights, one of the most important tools for driving safely, are often overlooked.

Poor visibility, especially at night, is a serious driving hazard.

According to the U.S.-based Motor Vehicle Lighting Council, poor visibility is cited as a factor in an estimated 2.8 million accidents, 23,000 fatal crashes and 2,300 pedestrian deaths every year.

Many people don't even realize they have choices when it comes to headlight bulbs. In fact, you can select from a range of bulbs that provide different levels of brightness that have a real impact on how far you can see down the road at night. Premium bulbs, for example, are actually 50 per cent brighter and increase forward visibility by 40 per cent when compared to standard bulbs.

Headlights play an important role in safe driving.

The following simple tips can also help make night driving safer:

» Change headlights in pairs before they burn out. Most headlights dim over time so evaluate yours every year for optimum performance.

» Upgrade to high performance halogen lighting for a brighter, whiter light. Studies have shown that whiter halogen lighting can improve reaction time, increase nighttime visibility and give better roadside viewing.

» Check headlight alignment. Misaligned headlights can be distracting and dangerous. Ask your auto service technician to align them for you.

» Clean headlight lenses regularly. You'll see better at night and in poor weather conditions.

In Sync with cutting-edge tech

By MICHAEL BANOVSKY
for Metro Vancouver

Ford and Microsoft have teamed up to produce Sync, a new take on automotive connectivity.

The downside to rapid progress in electronics means automakers are constantly on the back foot when it comes to totally embracing new technology.

What devices should they support? What devices will people be using in their cars next year? What about six months from now?

Spending over $30,000 on a car that doesn't know what an iPod is wouldn't be viewed by techno-savvy buyers as money well spent.

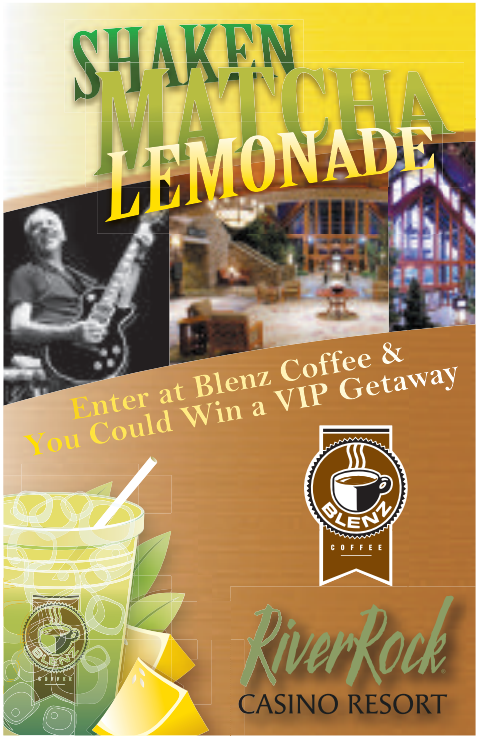
To combat and complement the constant crowd of new devices, Ford and Microsoft have teamed up to produce Sync, a new take on automotive connectivity. Both a hardware and software solution, it pairs steering wheel controls and an internal microphone with a sophisticated software platform mounted in the car.

The system can interface with most USB-based media players, including the incumbent (iPod) and challengers (Zune, Nomad Zen, etc.). By interface, I mean you can take direct control of the player from the car's controls. Your player will also charge through the USB port.

You can also slot in a USB thumb drive — a small, unpowered memory stick that can be loaded with any content from any computer, including thousands of MP3 files. Sync can access any music contained on a USB thumb drive, provided it isn't a protected format (iTunes store purchases won't work, but AAC and WMA files, among others, will.) It will play protected iTunes store purchases only if they're still on your iPod.

If you're so inclined, music can be served up with voice commands. Simply touch the button on the steering wheel, wait for the prompt, and say: "USB," then, "play," music from your device will start to play.

If your phone has Bluetooth, you can access just about any aspect of your device from Sync. You can say a number aloud and it will dial it, or just say the person's name.



Honda readying new hybrids

Honda FCX

Honda has released additional details regarding its new small hybrid car scheduled for introduction early next year. The official product name and full product details will be announced later this year.

The automaker has managed to slim down the nickel-hydride battery pack to make the car cheaper to produce, resulting in the most affordable hybrid vehicle to date.

Honda says it will be offered as a five-door hatchback with seating for five passengers and will employ an exterior design concept that evokes the Honda FCX Clarity fuel cell vehicle.

"Honda has been at the forefront of hybrid development since first introducing the Canadian public to hybrid technology with the launch of the Insight in 1999," said Jerry Chenkin, executive vice-president of Honda Canada Inc.

"New advancements in technology and production systems are resulting in cost reductions that will allow us to make hybrid technology available to a new generation of Canadian car buyers at a more affordable price."

There are also plans to introduce another unique small hybrid vehicle based on the CR-Z sports car concept, first seen at the 2007 Tokyo Motor Show, as well as a Honda Fit hybrid model.

Including the Civic Hybrid, these four gasoline-electric hybrid cars are expected to reach combined annual global sales of about 500,000 units.

expected sales

» Annual global sales of 200,000 units per year are expected for the Honda FCX, with approximately 100,000 accounted for by the North American market.

Iconic Land Rover marks 60th birthday

Six decades ago, a motoring icon made its public debut, when the original Land Rover was shown at a motor show in Amsterdam in 1948.

The current Defender (not sold in Canada) is clearly descended from that first vehicle, known as a Series 1. Extraordinarily, they even share a couple original parts, an oil filler plug and a cleat for tying down the canvas roof. But the rest of the vehicle technology has moved on considerably.

Since the first Series I model rolled off the production line at Solihull, the vehicles created by Land Rover have defined the SUV market. In 1970, the company introduced what's been called the most significant SUV ever, the Range Rover — the first SUV to be equally capable on-road as off-road.

Their spirit of adventure has been evident from the earliest days. Adventurers, farmers, scientists, naturalists, and outdoor sport enthusiasts have all used Land Rovers' capability to access some of the world's most inhospitable regions. For 60 years, the company's vehicles have also worked for a multitude of humanitarian and conservation organizations.

Exploring Ibiza's quieter side

Infamous Spanish party island also has lots to see

By TOM MARCHANT
for Metro World News

Ibiza is a place that always provokes a reaction. For some it's the warm reminiscing of hedonistic summers, for others, it's the shudder at the thought of spending time on an island with rowdy clubbers.

Anyone in the know realizes Ibiza is anything but the San Antonio clichés (and even that area is changing for the better). And to those Ibiza veterans who have adopted a been-there-done-that attitude, I would point out that the island is so progressive and contains so many creative residents the idea of it ever being "done" is simply a non-starter.

Ibiza is so much more than just a clubber's paradise. It offers everything from perfect escape time, to some of the best restaurants serving the freshest fish you will ever taste.

All this is mixed with a glamorous bohemian scene where you're just as likely to find yourself lunching al fresco on a table next to Robert De Niro as drinking cold beers at a beach bar with the Arctic Monkeys.

So what to do and how to do it? Here are just a few pointers that include some classic relaxation and some predictable (but oh so worthwhile) hedonistic socializing.

Starting with a little bit of relaxation time, head to the Can Talaias hotel in the north-east of the island and hang out by the prettiest pool in Ibiza; (hotelcantalaias.com).

From there, head to the gorgeous beach at Cala Mastella for a swim, before grabbing lunch at El Bigote where you can have a long, leisurely meal — just make sure you reserve though. Royalty has been turned away because they didn't have their name down (no phone, reservations in person).

For those looking for a bit more activity during the days, consider kitesurfing on the southeastern coast near Ibiza Town, at either Es Cavallet or Playa Den Bossa before kayaking round the southern tip to lunch at foodie favourite Sa Caleta, to the east of Cala Jondal.

For those searching for a great boho local market, head northeast of Ibiza Town to Las Dalias market on a Saturday morning, www.lasdalias.es.

For the true Ibiza look, head down to Benirras beach for a visit to Deseo, where insiders go for great leather sandals, cotton dresses and silks from Thailand. For vintage pieces, visit Ganesha, popular with regular visitors including Elle MacPherson and Jade Jagger (14 Montgri, Ibiza Town).

As your perfect day draws to a close, line up the perfect evening. Start off with dinner at Plaza del Sol, a restaurant within the old city walls with gorgeous views over Ibiza Town (Plaza Del Sol 7). Another favourite is Clos Denis in San Rafael, an island institution (Plaza de Iglesia, San Rafael).

Then it really is all about the night. You'll have heard of the super clubs including Pacha, www.pacha.com, and Amnesia, amnesia-ibiza.com — go there for Manumission on a Friday night — and while these clubs showcase the brilliant beating soul of the island and are full of weird and wonderful characters, don't forget what else is on offer.

From the trendy DC10, www.dc10ibiza.com, on a Monday night, to the more low-key but equally memorable Underground on a Thursday, ibizaunderground.com, these places provide wonderful Ibizan nightlife experiences.

Another cult classic is Space on a Sunday. It's regularly voted the best club in the world and you'll see why when you get there, www.space-ibiza.es. A sign to say you truly have arrived in Ibiza is getting an invite to the illegal beach parties that take place on a Saturday on either Playa S'Estanyol or Blue Martin Cala Jondal. But to fit in all of that nightlife alongside exploring, shopping, relaxing and taking in the island's other attractions — well, something will have to give.

A bird takes flight from a walkway formerly used by Alcatraz prisoners en route to their cells.

Alcatraz: The hotel?

The U.S. National Park Service is considering adding a hotel to Alcatraz Island, site of one of the world's most notorious prisons.

Unlike the cells afforded to inmates such as Al "Scarface" Capone, the facility would offer upscale accommodations like those now available at the Ahwahnee Hotel in California's Yosemite National Park.

"People are constantly saying they want to see more of the island," National Park Service spokesman Rich Weideman said. "A hotel would be the ultimate experience in visitor access."

Alcatraz Island, run by the U.S. National Park Service, is already San Francisco's second most-popular tourist attraction, after its famed cable cars. About 1.5 million people take ferries to visit the prison cellblock every year, and summer tickets sell out weeks ahead.

But many visitors say they also want to see parts of the 12-acre (five-hectare) island that are closed to the public, including wildlife areas, the room where prison guards bowled and the prison theater where gangsters watched From Here To Eternity.

Staying fit on the road

Keep on track with these tips

Stripped of exercise equipment, routine — and, well, discipline — it's not always easy staying fit on the road. The life of a travel writer is random, with little opportunity to spend a night in the same hotel, let alone maintain a monthly gym membership.

For the past few years, I've struggled with how to stay in shape while travelling but as I prepare for my upcoming stint abroad, I've finally enlisted the help of a professional.

Nathan Mellalieu is founder of Studeo 55, a boutique health club in the heart of Vancouver. This former college football player turned gym president has worked with the likes of Anne Hathaway, Jennifer Garner, Jessica Alba, Halle Berry, Harrison Ford and Ben Affleck, whipping them into shape with a series of specialized workouts.

Appreciating the fact that I roam around like a gypsy without the luxuries of a trainer, treadmill or weights, Nathan assures me there are ways to stay fit while I travel. He offers the following advice:

» There are many exercises that can be done on the floor of your hotel room: Squats, lunges and push-ups, the ultimate upper body exercise.

» Running is a great way to burn fat and keep the body trim. Run hard for three minutes, rest for one minute. Repeat this 5-7 times.

» If you don't mind carrying a few extra items in your suitcase, buy a heart rate monitor (to work out within your desired target heart rate) and an elastic band (for resistance training). There are a variety of arm exercises that can be done with a simple, lightweight band.

» People often say they're too tired to exercise. Remember that you don't have to conquer the world with every workout. Take a 15-minute walk, then stretch on the pool deck. Make your routine realistic but it's important to do something active, even if it's just a half-hour's worth of moving around.

» While waiting for connecting flights in the airport lounge, go for a walk around instead of just sitting.

» When coming home from a long day of sightseeing, walk up the stairs to your hotel room instead of taking the elevator.

» Being healthy can't be done through exercise alone, nutrition has a lot to do with it. Eat six small meals a day, instead of three big ones. When people eat often, they don't consume as much. Eating small portions every three hours will keep your metabolism working throughout the day.

» Eat breakfast within an hour of waking up to get your mojo going. Coffee is an appetite suppressant, so though you may not feel hungry, don't forget to eat!

» Get a good balance of carbs, proteins and fats within each meal. Try to stick to lean meats (chicken, fish) and base your meal around them. If you get a late night craving, stick to veggies since you can eat as many as you like.

Idol contestant is back, ready to sing

CTV PHOTO

Canadian Idol Top 24 contestant Shaun Francisco says he's been around music all his life.

Local hopeful earns spot in show's Top 24

Shaun Francisco

Age: 25
From: Vancouver, BC

By SANDY CAETANO
for Metro Vancouver

Participating in a show like Canadian Idol which has such magnitude can certainly take its toll on the contestants and viewers alike, especially when you see talented people get eliminated before you think it is their time to go.

Vancouver's 25-year-old Shaun Francisco wasn't one of those who was sent home before getting the chance to showcase his vocal talents for all of Canada to see. And now, having made it to the Top 24 of Canadian Idol, Francisco admits it's been a whirlwind getting this far.

"It's been definitely an emotional rollercoaster for sure, I think that it's been a life changing experience," says Francisco. "This competition is honestly giving me everything I've ever wanted to really start out with and accomplish … it's giving me the opportunity to accomplish what I love to do with music."

But it wasn't all that easy getting to where he stands now. Francisco used to sing in jazz, gospel and chamber choirs when he was younger, and also took vocal training while in high school.

He's been around music all his life, and learned how to play the piano, drums and guitar while in high school. Francisco also tried his luck at the singing competition last season, which turned out to be quite a nerve-racking experience.

"I've done (this) before … but this year I was a little bit more understanding of how things worked," he says.

Now he's back to show the judges and all of Canada how he's improved and that he's ready to take his career to the next level.

"So this year it's more of just a moment to prove myself and show that I've gotten better this year," says Francisco. "I just had to work on my performance side of things, being more of an entertainment factor."

Get Smart gadgets not all fiction

By GLEN MILLER
for Metro Vancouver

Funny thing about those gadgets in Get Smart. The covert people who make them in the real world are paying attention. So too was the case in 1965 when the Get Smart TV series first launched.

With all the catch-phrases the comedy TV series became famous for, the gadgets have endured in their legacy: the shoe phone, the cone of silence, the list goes on.

Truth is the real makers of gadgets and weapons do take note when some deceptive device appears on the big or small screen. That gadget might come darn close to mirroring what exists in the real world of espionage.

did you know?

» The movie's gadget-makers, Bruce (Masi Oka) and Lloyd (Nate Torrence) are stars of a companion DVD to the movie called Bruce and Lloyd Out of Control. It's a parallel storyline to Get Smart and will be released on July 1.

The covert devices used in the Get Smart movie are not far removed from the ingenuity dreamed up four decades ago.

Anne Hathaway, who plays Agent 99 in the film, got to employ three gadgets, and loved learning how to execute them: the compact that releases a gas that exposes laser beams; exploding dental floss; and a cellphone with knockout gas inside of it.

"When the gadgets worked, it would be great, but another funny part is when they wouldn't work," Hathaway told Metro.

In fact, Hathaway says one contribution of hers to the film, well other than that acting part, was suggesting how to execute a gadget scene that had been going awry for Steve Carell (Maxwell Smart, Agent 86). "I was proud of that," she says.

From the TV series, scenes featuring the cone of silence contain some of the best comedy skits going, but guess what . . . it existed.

Director Peter Segal says someone who worked on the movie had a relative who had a connection to the CIA and was able to confirm this fact: The cone of silence was used in the American Embassy in Moscow. A plastic cone was placed over people and music played inside so the conversation couldn't be picked up by a bug. "And as usual, they said it didn't work," said Segal, laughing. "Almost everything in the movie is based in some kind of reality and so we came up with a few of our own gadgets to go along with some of the iconic ones (from the TV series)."

Guitar heroes help out

Dandy Warhols team up with Knopfler, Campbell

By ROB McMAHON
for Metro Vancouver

EMI MUSIC PHOTO

The Dandy Warhols play the Vogue Theatre tonight.

For drummer Brent De Boer, the high point of recording the Dandy Warhols' seventh album came in the form of a guitar.

Earth to the Dandy Warhols features the shiny steel National made famous on the cover of Dire Straits' 1985 disc Brothers in Arms.

"(Singer) Courtney (Taylor-Taylor) wanted Mark (Knopfler) to play his dobro on Love Song, and he played it," said De Boer. "That shiny guitar from the cover of (Dire Straits') Brothers in Arms — he actually played it!"

De Boers' enthusiasm grew as he explained the track also featured Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers' guitarist Mike Campbell, who arrived in the studio the day after performing at the Superbowl. To add to the story, the song was started (along with Dreamt of Yes and Valerie Yum) during a studio session with electronic pioneers Massive Attack.

"We went to (Massive Attack's) studio in Bristol and drank a lot of hard cider," said De Boer, laughing. "That project never quite finished, but we might get back together with them."

If nothing else, the Dandies' new album — and the band itself, as featured in the 2004 documentary DIG! — are far from boring. Headquartered in the Odditorium, a three-quarter-block studio in Portland, the psychedelic rockers' kitchen sink approach appears in everything from their musical compositions to their studio's décor.

"We have a den and a bar, a studio, and a green screen room where we filmed the Mission Control video," said De Boer. "(And) we permanently installed the three rooms used in our video for Used to Be Friends."

When writing, the Dandies typically approach each song individually and then build the album flow. Things change for the show—if an album track peaks in a wall of psychedelic noise, the group tones it down, switching the drum tempo or pulling out an acoustic guitar. But this time, De Boer explained the album (the first released on their label Beat the World Records) received some last-minute changes. The songs were all written, recorded and arranged when singer Courtney Taylor-Taylor jumped in and tweaked a few things.

"(Courtney) got this idea to put guitar over a song, and I was unsure and left the studio for a couple of hours," said De Boer. "When I returned it blew my mind — it's on Mission Control, the guitar that starts up just before the drums kick in. It really gave it a kick, almost like you're at some club in Europe."

Death Magnetic

New Metallica disc in September

MUSIC Metallica's new album will be titled Death Magnetic and is expected in September.

The news was revealed over the weekend via the band's website.

No new material has been played live at the band's handful of recent shows, but British journalists have heard rough mixes of six untitled songs, several of which cross the seven-minute mark.

Death Magnetic was produced by Rick Rubin and is the follow-up to 2003's St. Anger, which has sold 1.76 million copies in the United States. REUTERS

Rob Dickinson still rolling

Ex-Catherine Wheel front man says reunion possible

By IAN NATHANSON
for Metro Vancouver

PETER KAGAN PHOTO

Rob Dickinson

A Catherine Wheel reunion isn't totally out of the question, according to Rob Dickinson.

The front man for the '90s U.K. alt-rockers responsible for such singles as Black Metallic, The Nude and Crank even proffered a time frame: Just not this year.

"Everyone still keeps in touch," Dickinson says of his relations with guitarist Brian Futter, drummer Neil Sims and latter-day bassist Ben Ellis. "It might be 2010 as the time to think about doing something again."

Ideally, that would mark 20 years since Catherine Wheel first formed in Great Yarmouth, England, and 10 years since the "parking of the band," as Dickinson affectionately calls it, following its fifth record, Wishville.

For Canadian fans, the last known sighting of Catherine Wheel was as part of Our Lady Peace's cross-country Summersault musicfest in 2000. But Dickinson explains by that time, "Some of that sense of adventure had disappeared. There was no reason for us to keep slogging away other than to please ourselves. We all had other things we wanted to do."

Futter and Sims immersed themselves in a project called 50 Ft. Monster and Ellis joined a new group, Serafin. Dickinson, meanwhile, moved to New York and later California where he worked at a snail's pace towards his 2005 solo debut for Sanctuary Records, Fresh Wine For The Horses. Even after its release, Dickinson still felt the disc could be improved. While he says Sanctuary might not have initially given the record its proper due — the label disappeared in late 2007 — he credits interest from producer pal Bob Ezrin (Alice Cooper, Pink Floyd) and Universal Canada president and CEO Randy Lennox in giving a reworked Fresh Wine, re-released last week on the Fontana International label, a second shot.

"It was that rare opportunity to be able to reassess the record by messing around with the sequencing," he says, "I genuinely think this album is now in a state where it should've been in the first time around."

Species actress has Impact

HOLLYWOOD NORTH

andrea.woo@metronews.ca

Natasha Henstridge, perhaps best known for her starring role in the Species trilogy, will conclude a two-month stay in Vancouver this weekend when shooting for the two-part TV movie Impact wraps. Directed by Mike Rohl (Smallville, Eureka, Supernatural), the sci-fi disaster flick is about a giant meteor hurtling toward Earth, presumably spooking civilians. The film also features Steven Culp, who played CIA agent Clayton Webb on JAG and Rex Van de Kamp on Desperate Housewives until that creepy pharmacist merked him.

Currently in the middle of filming is the first season of Samurai Girl, a mini-series based on the popular young adult book series by Carrie Asai. Jamie Chung (MTV's Real World) plays Heaven, a 19-year-old who learns that her adoptive father is a Yakuza boss who may have killed her brother ("Oh, did I not mention that?"). Seeking to take down his criminal empire, she embarks on a string of shenanigans that intertwine her American upbringing with the Samurai traditions of her ancestors. Like with Richmond sushi spots, all Japanese characters are Chinese. The series premieres in September.

Lastly, a potential gem called Web of Desire is currently filming in the city. A synopsis of the direct-to-video project: "A smart, attractive, ER physician, Beth, turns to an Internet site for medical personnel to share the frustrations of her job and the stress of her family life and connects with someone. When they meet in person, Beth is surprised to find that Finn is a woman. The next thing Beth knows, she's awaking in Finn's bed not knowing what happened." I hate when that happens. Filming in Vancouver wraps Saturday.

Fall's big shows leaked

INTELLEVISION
RICK McGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

LEAKED: Somebody at my favorite TV blog, TVtattle.com, must have let their curiosity do the (net-) surfing for them, because they discovered that at least two of this fall's big new shows have already been leaked to online file-sharing networks, months in advance of their premieres. J. J. Abrams new X-Filesesque Fringe is out there, as is True Blood, Alan "Six Feet Under" Ball's new vampire show for HBO.

The TVtattle blogger found them on a site called Insomniac Times, whose proprietor posts about alternate energy tech and other geeky stuff along with the odd leaked file making its way out there onto Pirate Bay and other sites. A quick search on btjunkie.org revealed that both shows have already been disseminated pretty widely, with hundreds of "seeders" for True Blood alone.

Now, I realize that I'm being a naughty boy by even talking about this stuff, but the fact is that screeners get leaked all the time, and if you're really hot to see a show, either a few weeks or months after it's aired, or just as long in advance, chances are you'll probably be able to find it out there in the Internet's capacious grey zones. The media is usually blamed, but by the time newspapers and magazines have been serviced with sneak previews of new shows, they've usually already made their appearance online, put out there by someone a bit higher in the screener food chain at the studios or their production and duplication houses.

Having finished product available long before it's supposed to be broadcast — even if it's theoretically meant for a select audience — is the real problem, since simple laws of supply and demand, not to mention human nature, means that leaks will happen, no matter how much security is put in place. Lawsuits won't work either, Hollywood homies — just ask your depressed buddies in the music business.

What's required at this point is a whole new way of looking at production and programming — a change that's basically revolutionary, if you're a network executive working with a business model that hasn't changed since Burns And Allen was a radio show. Forget broadcasting, fall debuts, even seasons; with a pilot in hand, the networks — or any producer with access to a distribution network online — can make a show available, and gauge audience response accordingly, and at a fraction of the cost of producing episodes in advance of demand.

Every fall, shows fall by the wayside after just a handful of episodes, with even more in the can, while networks scramble for replacements for the now-vacant time slot, to the consternation of advertisers. Every year, this system looks more and more precarious, and the sense of dissatisfaction and anxiety increases, while the audiences have already begun consuming programming the way they want — at their leisure. The future, at least for TV, is now — somebody just has to tell the networks.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Another Day in Paradise
If you didn't have the time to commit to the recent mini-series "Carrier," you can still get a taste of life aboard the USS Nimitz, an aircraft carrier deployed to the Persian Gulf, from this new documentary. It focuses on three of the more than 5,000 people serving aboard the ship: a salsa-dancing Marine, an ordnance seaman worried about his pregnant girlfriend back home, and a fighter pilot who's more lover than warrior. 6 PM on PBS

Family Guy
He has a lot of voice credits under his belt, but this time James Woods gets to play himself. As any fan of the series knows, the local high school is named after the actor, so when Brian — in a bid to impress his black girlfriend — suggests the school change its name to Martin Luther King Jr. High, Peter brings Woods in to stop him. This creates a rift between dog and owner, and Woods becomes Peter's new best friend — and his psycho stalker. 5:30 PM on TROP

Hathaway singing for love

Actress Anne Hathaway really did give her boyfriend the gift of song – by recording an album of his favourite tracks just for him, imdb.com reports.

The Devil Wears Prada star is dating Italian businessman Raffaello Follieri and for his last birthday, she decided to give him an extra special present, booking a recording studio and laying down her own versions of all his favourite love songs. But Hathaway, 25, insists she has no aspirations to be a pop star – and the LP is for Follieri's ears only. She says, "On his birthday, I went to a recording studio and recorded a CD. I sang all the songs he loves.

"I've done things for him I never thought I could do for anyone."

Blige's big heart

Mary J. Blige has a heart the size of her record sales, PageSix.com reports.

Last week, Blige was at the Diane von Furstenberg store in New York City when she overheard a girl having a problem at the register. A spy said, "The girl had a dress on hold that she loved, and the bill was $900. She thought it was only $500, and she couldn't afford it."

Blige told the saleswoman, "Go get the girl. I want to pay for the balance on the dress." The customer at first declined Blige's offer but relented after the singer said, "I know what it's like to want something and not be able to have it. I insist."

The customer wanted to send her a cheque for the balance, but Blige said, "Just enjoy it. I'm blessed, so let me do this."

Larter loves her 'juicy' butt

The 32-year-old Ali Larter reveals she once had to have her thighs duct-taped before a photo shoot because "they were a little too round," usmagazine.com reports.

Larter also recalled, in an interview with Allure, another instance when she was shooting a movie on location and the filmmakers noticed she had put on a few pounds. "The faxes went out from the producers and the director to my agents to my manager to call me and ask me to lose weight," Larter says. "I just remember sitting in my trailer hysterically crying from the embarrassment I felt about myself, my body – and that no one could talk to me directly."

Now Larter has found the perfect balance. "When I'm in really good shape, I like my butt. It's juicy." Metro News Services

Quiet life fine for Liv

Actress Liv Tyler is happy to shun the celebrity party lifestyle in favour of spending her nights in front of the TV, imdb.com reports.

The Armageddon beauty is enjoying the quiet life as a single mum to four-year-old son Milo, after recently splitting from British rocker Royston Langdon after five years of marriage.

She tells Britain's Cosmopolitan magazine, "I don't have any urge to run naked along a beach or get drunk at a party.

"I live quietly in New York, out of the public eye. I don't go out much. My favourite nights are staying in watching TV or going to a movie and eating popcorn."

HOROSCOPE

ARIES | March 21-April 20
Confer with colleagues about a special project. An elder may cause the end of an affair. Your secret treat is nobody's business.

TAURUS | April 21-May 21
Think about an alternative approach to nurturing. Use a remedy to control emotional responses. A visitor tells a personal story.

GEMINI | May 22-June 21
The answer to a question is obvious. Being too indulgent destabilizes your routine. It's time to listen to anyone who cares deeply.

CANCER | June 22-July 22
Tuesday's news finally hits home. Your limit of tolerance is reached. Notify your friends of emotional distress.

LEO | July 23-Aug. 23
Restless people will create mayhem. A phone conversation leads to a purchase. Jumping to conclusions will cause misunderstandings.

VIRGO | Aug. 24-Sept. 22
Asking tough questions will point up a friend's anxiety. Don't expect rewards for scolding anyone. Passing the buck causes problems.

LIBRA | Sep. 23-Oct. 23
A meaningful encounter has consequences. Delight overwhelms you when you get an invitation. No one can ignore odd musical tastes.

SCORPIO | Oct. 24- Nov. 22
A conversation is scary when emotions run wild. Don't look to your family for comedy. Protect elders from disturbing news.

SAGITTARIUS | Nov. 23- Dec. 21
Somebody goes out on a limb for you. Hugs and kisses are shared by pals. A bore makes you pause to think.

CAPRICORN | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Resist the temptation to over-indulge. Don't rest till a problem is tended to. Money changes will lead to long-term gain.

AQUARIUS | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Something wonderful is coming. Others may be worried but you'll love being sassy. Surrender to the pleasure of being cared for.

PISCES | Feb. 19-Mar. 20
Nastiness can be prevented by showing respect. Avoid arguing about romance or children. Doing good will create harmony.
